

GCCISD to host Early College High School information meetings

Parents seeking information about Goose Creek CISD's Early College High School are encouraged to attend a meeting tonight (4/8) at Horace Mann Junior School. The meeting, which will begin at 5:30 p.m., will be held in the auditorium.

Parents will be able to ask questions regarding Early College High School and the application process. There will be a translator to provide information in Spanish.

Applications will be available and representatives from Goose Creek CISD will assist in the application process.

Goose Creek CISD's Early College High School — which will be housed on the Lee College campus — will provide students the opportunity to take up to 60 college hours and earn an associate degree while pursuing their high school diploma.

College courses taken through Early College High School will be at no cost to students.

Early College High School will target low-income youth, first-generation college goers, English language learners, students at-risk of not graduating, and other young people underrepresented in higher education.

In its inaugural year, Goose Creek CISD's Early College High School will enroll about 100 freshmen, eventually building its enrollment to approximately 400 in four years.
