'All's Well That Ends Well'

Ross S. Sterling High School proudly presents William Shakespeare's "All's Well That Ends Well."

Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 5, during Periods 1,3,5,7 (5th period performance for people who have first lunch) on Wednesday, Oct. 6, and during Periods 2, 4, and 6 on Thursday, Oct. 7.

Each performance will be in the Sterling High School auditorium. Admission is $1.

All's Well That Ends Well is believed to have been written between 1604 and 1605.

The play's central romantic figures are a young nobleman called Bertram and an orphaned commoner called Helena.

The play is about the problems with their relationship and romance which are due to their different backgrounds and that it is at first a one sided affair with Helena falling in love with Bertram.

Being a comedy, (although it has serious undercurrents), Bertram comes around and All's Well does indeed End Well as the title of the play says.

In a scene from "All's Well That Ends Well," the Queen (Clarita Hernandez) and Count Bertram (Dalton White) have a heated argument about a ring. Bertram is trying to convince the Queen that he never gave it to Helena.
